

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

JOHN SHEK,

No. C-10-1483 EMC

Plaintiff,

v.

CALIFORNIA NURSES
ASSOCIATION/CAREGIVERS & HEALTHCARE EMPLOYEES UNION, et al.,

Defendants.

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANTS’ MOTION TO DISMISS; DENYING PLAINTIFF’S MOTION TO AMEND COMPLAINT; AND DENYING DEFENDANTS’ MOTION TO STRIKE
PLAINTIFF’S SUR-REPLY

(Docket Nos. 7, 11, 15, 20)

Plaintiff John Shek has filed suit against Defendants the California Nurses Association/Caregivers and Healthcare Employees Union (“Union”), Joanne Jung, and Charles Maltzahn. The main claim asserted against Defendants is breach of the duty of fair representation. Currently pending before the Court are Defendants’ motion to dismiss and Plaintiff’s motion to amend his complaint. Having considered the parties’ briefs and accompanying submissions, as well as the oral argument of counsel and Mr. Shek, appearing pro se, the Court hereby GRANTS Defendants’ motion and DENIES Plaintiff’s. The Court DENIES Defendants’ motion to strike the sur-reply filed by Mr. Shek in opposition to the motion to dismiss.

I. FACTUAL & PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Although Mr. Shek’s original and proposed amended complaint are lacking in specifics as to the alleged facts underlying his claims against Defendants, the papers he has submitted in support of his motion and in opposition to Defendants’ motion reveal the basis of his claims – in particular, an affidavit, dated May 1, 2009, that he submitted in conjunction with administrative proceedings

1 before the National Labor Relations Board (“NLRB”). See Docket No. 17 (Reply, Ex. F) 2 [hereinafter “Shek Aff.”]. Although these papers may not be considered for purposes of a motion to 3 dismiss, see Schneider v. Cal. Dept. of Corrections, 151 F.3d 1194, 1197 n.1 (9th Cir. 1998) (noting 4 that, “[i]n determining the propriety of a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal, a court may not look beyond the 5 complaint to a plaintiff’s moving papers, such as a memorandum in opposition to a defendant’s 6 motion to dismiss”), Mr. Shek could potentially amend his complaint to include the facts alleged in 7 these papers, and therefore the papers will be considered as guideposts. The papers reflect the 8 following allegations by Mr. Shek.

9 Alta Bates Summit Medical Center (“Alta Bates”) employed Mr. Shek as a radiology 10 technician from October 8, 2004, until September 4, 2008, when he was terminated. See Shek Aff.
11 at 1. During this time period, he was represented by the Union. See id. Mr. Maltzahn was the 12 president of the Union and Ms. Jung was Mr. Shek’s Union representative. See id.; see also Docket 13 No. 14 (Opp’n, Ex. D) (business card for Mr. Maltzahn).

14 On or about May 10, 2008, while he was employed by Alta Bates, Mr. Shek was accused of 15 dislodging a patient’s IV. As a result, he was issued a written warning and given a three-day 16 suspension. Pursuant to Alta Bates policy, Mr. Shek prepared an incident report regarding the 17 incident. To prepare the report, he had to contact the patient and ask for her name. The patient gave 18 him a note certifying that he did not dislodge her IV. Mr. Shek submitted his incident report and the 19 patient’s note to Alta Bates. Alta Bates then changed its reason as to why he was being disciplined.
20 Alta Bates now claimed that he was being disciplined because he had inappropriately contacted the 21 patient. See id. at 2.

22 Subsequently, Mr. Shek filed a charge against Alta Bates with the Equal Employment 23 Opportunity Commission (“EEOC”), alleging discrimination based on race, sex, age, national origin, 24 color, and retaliation. See id. Mr. Shek also had Ms. Jung, his Union representative, initiate a 25 grievance on his behalf against Alta Bates. See id. Ms. Jung did not effectively assist Mr. Shek 26 during the grievance process. See id. at 2-4.

27 On August 18, 2008, Mr. Shek injured his knee at work. He reported the injury to Alta Bates 28 but it did not give him a worker’s compensation form or any treatment. Several days later, on

1 August 21, 2008, Alta Bates suspended Mr. Shek pending an investigation. Mr. Shek later found out 2 that Alta Bates was investigating whether he had purportedly put a wrong number on a crash cart.
3 See id. at 4.

4 On August 22, 2008, Mr. Shek and Ms. Jung met with Alta Bates regarding the suspension.
5 Alta Bates claimed that Mr. Shek was suspended based on, inter alia, intimidating behavior toward a 6 coworker and management, insubordinate behavior, falsifying a time card, and sleeping on the job.
7 See id. Mr. Shek's suspension continued until September 4, 2008, when he attended another 8 meeting with Alta Bates. Both Ms. Jung and Mr. Maltzahn (the Union president) were present at the 9 meeting. At that time, Mr. Shek was given a termination letter. The letter stated that he was being 10 terminated based on the conduct listed above. During the meeting, Ms. Jung and Mr. Maltzahn 11 allowed Alta Bates to present its version of the facts. They did not say anything in Mr. Shek's 12 defense. See id. at 5.

13 Mr. Shek asked Ms. Jung to initiate another grievance, which she did on September 5, 2008.
14 See id. at 6. Prior to a meeting with Alta Bates about the grievance, Mr. Shek told Ms. Jung about 15 numerous complaints that he had and asked her to discuss them at the meeting. See id. at 6-7. The 16 meeting with Alta Bates was held on October 5, 2008. Ms. Jung did not discuss the complaints at 17 the meeting and provided a minimal rebuttal to the employer's charges. See id. at 7. No agreement 18 was reached at the meeting, and so the matter was referred to the Board of Adjustment ("BOA").
19 See id.

20 The BOA hearing was held on February 5, 2009. Ms. Jung represented Mr. Shek at the 21 hearing. The panel found that Mr. Shek did not cheat on his time card and that the sleeping-on-the-22 job claim was not warranted. See id. at 8.

23 Following the hearing, Ms. Jung informed Mr. Shek that the Union would not arbitrate the 24 grievance because it was filed before the Union contract was ratified. According to Mr. Shek, the 25 contract had in fact been ratified and, even if it had not been, that was immaterial because the events 26 at issue had taken place under the old contract. See id. at 9.

27 Ms. Jung subsequently urged Mr. Shek to settle his dispute with Alta Bates for $1,000 and a 28 conversion of his termination to a resignation. Mr. Shek responded that he would not settle for an

1 amount less than $80,000. Ms. Jung then suggested $5,000, but Mr. Shek refused. Thereafter, 2 nothing happened. According to Mr. Shek, the grievance was closed on April 8, 2009. See id.

3 Subsequently, Mr. Shek challenged the Union's decision not to arbitrate with the NLRB. In 4 support of his challenge, he submitted a confidential witness affidavit dated May 1, 2009, which 5 contained the above allegations regarding his interactions with Alta Bates, the Union, Ms. Jung, and 6 Mr. Maltzahn. See Shek Aff. On May 26, 2009, the Regional Director denied Mr. Shek relief. See
7 Prop. Am. Compl., Ex. 1 (NLRB decision). Mr. Shek then appealed the Regional Director's 8 decision but that appeal was denied on October 2, 2009. See id. The NLRB found that the Union's 9 actions were not motivated by discriminatory, arbitrary, or capricious considerations as required to 10 constitute a violation of National Labor Relations Act ("NLRA") §8(b)(1)(A). See id. The NLRB 11 also declined to issue an unfair labor practice complaint. See id.

12 On April 7, 2010, Mr. Shek initiated this lawsuit against the Union, Ms. Jung, and Mr.
13 Maltzahn. Defendants moved to dismiss the action, after which Mr. Shek filed a motion to amend 14 the complaint. Currently pending before the Court are these two motions, as well as Defendants' 15 motion to strike a sur-reply filed by Mr. Shek in opposition to Defendants' motion to dismiss.

16 II. DISCUSSION

17 A. Motion to Strike

18 As a preliminary matter, the Court denies Defendants' motion to strike. The Court 19 acknowledges that, as a formal matter, Defendants' position is correct – i.e., no sur-reply is 20 permitted under the Civil Local Rules absent approval by a court. See Civ. L.R. 7-3(d). Here, Mr.
21 Shek did not obtain the Court's approval to file a sur-reply. That being said, the Court shall not 22 strike the sur-reply because, at this point, the Court is more interested in resolving the pending 23 disputes on the merits. In addition, the Court affords Mr. Shek some leniency because he is 24 unrepresented herein. The Court warns Mr. Shek, however, that it expects him to comply with the 25 Civil Local Rules, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and any other applicable law for future 26 filings. That he is proceeding pro se does not exempt him from compliance with applicable rules.

1 B. Motion to Amend Complaint

2 Because Mr. Shek contends that his filing of an amended complaint moots Defendants' 3 motion to dismiss, the Court addresses next his motion to amend. To the extent Mr. Shek contends 4 that the Court must automatically accept his amended complaint, he is incorrect. Federal Rule of 5 Civil Procedure 15(a) does give a plaintiff a right to amend once as a matter of course. However, 6 that right must be exercised within a specific time frame – i.e., within 21 days after serving the 7 original complaint or within 21 days after the defendant has filed a motion to dismiss. See Fed. R.
8 Civ. P. 15(a). If the amendment is not made within that time frame, then the plaintiff may amend 9 only if the defendant consents or if the court gives leave to amend. See id.

10 Here, Mr. Shek did not timely file his amended complaint. Mr. Shek did not file his 11 amended complaint until June 22, 2010. That was more than 21 days after the original complaint 12 had been served on Defendants (in April and May 2010), see Docket Nos. 3-6 (executed summons), 13 and more than 21 days after Defendants filed their motion to dismiss (in May 2010). Accordingly, 14 Mr. Shek must obtain leave of the Court to file his amended complaint.

15 Rule 15(a)(2) provides that a “court should freely give leave [to amend] when justice so 16 requires.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2). Ninth Circuit case law instructs that a court should consider the 17 following factors in determining whether to grant leave to amend: bad faith, undue delay, prejudice 18 to the opposing party, and/or futility. See Serra v. Lappin, 600 F.3d 1191, 1200 (9th Cir. 2010); see 19 also Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182 (1962). In the instant case, the critical issue is whether Mr.
20 Shek’s proposed amendment is futile. See Platt Elec. Supply, Inc. v. EOFF Elec., Inc., 522 F.3d 21 1049, 1060 (9th Cir. 2008) (noting that ““there is a general rule that parties are allowed to amend 22 their pleadings, [but] it does not extend to cases in which any amendment would be an exercise in 23 futility, or where the amended complaint would also be subject to dismissal”). The only substantive 24 difference between the original complaint and the proposed amended complaint is that the latter 25 complaint contains two additional claims against Defendants -- (1) a state claim for breach of 26 fiduciary duty and (2) a federal claim for disability discrimination. As discussed below, these 27 additional claims are futile and therefore Mr. Shek’s request to file an amended complaint is denied.
28

1 1. State Claim for Breach of Fiduciary Duty

2 In the original complaint, Mr. Shek asserted a claim for breach of the duty of fair 3 representation pursuant to federal law -- more specifically, federal labor law. In the proposed 4 amended complaint, Mr. Shek now includes a claim for breach of fiduciary duty based on state law.
5 The state law claim is futile because state law tort actions against unions are preempted by federal 6 labor law where “the duty to the employee of which the tort is a violation is created by a 7 collective-bargaining agreement and without existence independent of the agreement.” United 8 Steelworkers of Am., AFL-CIO-CLC v. Rawson, 495 U.S. 362, 369 (1990). Here, Mr. Shek’s state 9 claim for breach of is based on the collective bargaining agreement and therefore is preempted.

10 2. Federal Claim for Disability Discrimination

11 In the proposed amended complaint, Mr. Shek also claims that Defendants discriminated 12 against him in violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act (“ADA”). This claim is problematic 13 because Mr. Shek has failed to allege any facts to support the claim. See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S.
14 Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) (demanding more than “unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me 15 accusation”); Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007) (holding that a complaint 16 requires more than “labels and conclusions”). Furthermore, although Mr. Shek claims in his papers 17 to have suffered a knee injury, there are no allegations that that knee injury (assuming it qualified as 18 a disability) was the basis for any action taken by the Union or the individual defendants.

19 Assuming, however, that Mr. Shek could allege some set of facts to support the 20 discrimination claim, the claim is futile because Mr. Shek did not exhaust administrative remedies 21 prior to bringing the discrimination claim, which is a requirement under federal law. See Josephs v.
22 Pacific Bell, 443 F.3d 1050, 1061 (9th Cir. 2006) (stating that plaintiff “must first file a timely 23 EEOC complaint against the allegedly discriminatory party before bringing an ADA suit in federal 24 court”); Deppe v. United Airlines, 217 F.3d 1262, 1267 (9th Cir. 2000) (holding that plaintiff could 25 bring suit because he did in fact exhaust his administrative remedies). The Court notes that papers 26 submitted by Mr. Shek indicate that he initiated administrative proceedings against Alta Bates as his 27 employer but that he specifically declined to name the Union or the individual defendants as an 28 additional discriminating entity or persons. See Docket No. 14 (Opp’n, Ex. C) (EEOC Intake Questionnaire). Nor did he assert a claim for discrimination on the basis of disability. Rather, the only EEOC complaint filed expressly enumerated discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, national origin, color, and retaliation.¹ Even if Mr. Shek now tried to initiate administrative proceedings against the Union based on its conduct vis-a-vis Alta Bates, he may be time barred from bringing suit. An ADA claim must be filed with the EEOC within 180 days of the last act of alleged discrimination. See Santa Maria v. Pacific Bell, 202 F.3d 1170, 1176 (9th Cir. 2000) (barring claims filed with EEOC outside of 180 days, unless plaintiff initially instituted proceedings with a state or local agency, in which case he has 300 days).

C. Motion to Dismiss

Having denied Mr. Shek's motion to amend, the Court now turns to his original complaint and Defendants' motion to dismiss that complaint. The Court does so because the amended complaint contains the same allegations and thus those allegations remain at issue and are ripe for adjudication. In the motion, Defendants contend that all of the claims asserted in the complaint should be dismissed for failure to state a claim pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). A motion to dismiss based on Rule 12(b)(6) challenges the legal sufficiency of the claims alleged in the complaint. See Parks Sch. of Business, Inc. v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). In considering such a motion, a court must take all allegations of material fact as true and construe them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, although "conclusory allegations of law and unwarranted inferences are insufficient' to avoid a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal." Cousins v. Lockyer, 568 F.3d 1063, 1067 (9th Cir. 2009). While "a complaint need not contain detailed factual allegations . . . it must plead 'enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.'" Id. "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." 129 S. Ct. at 1949; see also Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556. When dealing with pro se plaintiffs, allegations contained

¹ To be sure, later in EEOC form, Mr. Shek responded to a question about "if you allege discrimination because of your disability" with a statement that "they" were afraid his disability will act up. But he did not check the disability box as a basis for his EEOC complaint and this oblique statement does not sufficiently raise a disability discrimination claim with the EEOC, and certainly does not do so vis-a-vis the union.

1 in the complaint are held to less stringent standards than formal pleadings drafted by lawyers. See 2 Haines v. Kerner, 404 U.S. 519, 520 (1972).

3 As noted above, Mr. Shek's complaint is lacking in specifics with respect to the facts 4 underlying the claims asserted against Defendants. Nevertheless, based on the papers submitted in 5 conjunction with Defendants' motion -- in particular, the confidential witness affidavit Mr. Shek 6 submitted to the NLRB -- it is clear that the complaint against Defendants rests on their conduct with 7 respect to the grievances Mr. Shek initiated against Alta Bates. The Court proceeds with the 8 assumption that the facts alleged in Mr. Shek's confidential witness statement are true.

9 1. Breach of the Duty of Fair Representation

10 Mr. Shek's main claim against Defendants is breach of the duty of fair representation 11 pursuant to the NLRA.²

12 a. Union

13 Under the NLRA, a claim for breach of the duty of fair representation may be brought 14 against a union when its actions are discriminatory, hostile, or arbitrary or done in bad faith. See 15 Beck v. United Food & Commercial Workers Union, Local 99, 506 F.3d 874, 879 (9th Cir. 2007) 16 (stating that the union's duty is to "serve the interests of all members without hostility or 17 discrimination toward any, to exercise its discretion with complete good faith and honesty, and to 18 avoid arbitrary conduct"). However, the statute of limitations for such a claim is only six months.
19 See DelCostello v. Int'l Broth. of Teamsters, 462 U.S. 151, 154-55 (1983) (concluding that six-20 month statute of limitation set forth in section 10(b) of NLRA, 29 U.S.C. § 160(b) applies to a suit 21 against a union for breach of duty of fair representation – same as six-month statute of limitations); 22 Soremekun v. Thrifty Payless, Inc., 509 F.3d 978, 989 n.39 (9th Cir. 2007) (noting the same). At the 23 hearing, Mr. Shek asserted that the statute of limitations is actually two years, and not six months, 24 but the authority he cited does not support that proposition.

27 ² The Court notes that, in his complaint, Mr. Shek also refers to Public Employment Relations 28 Board ("PERB") § 8(b)(1)(A). That statute, however, does not exist and it seems apparent that Mr. Shek meant to reference NLRA § 8(b)(1)(A).

1 First, Mr. Shek has referred to a Ninth Circuit order issued in Perry v. Hollingsworth, No.
2 09-17241 (9th Cir.), on October 20, 2009. See Docket No. 22 (Opp'n at 10). But that order does not 3 include a discussion of a statute of limitations at all. Instead, in the order, the Ninth Circuit simply 4 instructs the appellants to move for a voluntary dismissal of the appeal or show cause why the 5 appeal should not be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. See Perry, No. 09-17241 (9th Cir.) (Docket 6 No. 8). Moreover, because Perry is not a case involving the NLRA, it has no applicability to the 7 instant case. See generally Perry v. Schwarzenegger, 591 F.3d 1147 (9th Cir. 2010) (addressing 8 propriety of protective order in case involving a challenge to the constitutionality of California's 9 Proposition 8, which amended the California Constitution to provide that only marriage between a 10 man and a woman is valid or recognized in California).

11 Second, Mr. Shek has cited Trainer Wortham & Co. v. Betz, 130 S. Ct. 2400 (2010), and Betz 12 v. Trainer Wortham & Co., 519 F.3d 863 (9th Cir. 2008). See Docket No. 22 (Opp'n at 10, 8). But 13 the Supreme Court decision in Betz is simply an order granting a petition for a writ of certiorari; it 14 does not say anything about a statute of limitations. As for the Ninth Circuit decision in Betz, it was 15 vacated based on the Supreme Court decision. And in any event, Betz dealt with the statute of 16 limitations for a claim brought under the federal securities law, not a claim brought under the 17 NLRA, and thus the case has no applicability here.

18 Having concluded that a six-month statute of limitations is applicable under DelCostello and 19 Soremekun, the Court turns to when the statute of limitations began to run in Mr. Shek's case. The 20 Ninth Circuit has instructed that the six-month period generally begins to run "when an employee 21 knows or should know of the alleged breach of duty of fair representation by a union." Galindo v.
22 Stoody Co., 793 F.2d 1502, 1509 (9th Cir. 1986). Here, Mr. Shek knew of the alleged breach at the 23 latest by May 1, 2009, when he submitted the confidential witness affidavit to the NLRB, which 24 described the allegedly improper conduct by the Union, including the failure to arbitrate the 25 grievance because no Union contract was in place, a fact which Mr. Shek asserts in his affidavit was 26 false and inaccurate. Because Mr. Shek did not initiate this lawsuit within six months thereafter 27 (i.e., by November 1, 2009), his claim for breach of the duty of fair representation is time barred.
28

1 In his papers, as well as at the hearing, Mr. Shek argued that he did not know that he had a 2 claim for breach of the duty of fair representation until he talked to a law firm in March 2010 – i.e., 3 only a few weeks before he filed this lawsuit. See Docket No. 19 (Sur-Reply at 2). But Mr. Shek 4 has misunderstood the legal standard as to when the statute of limitations begins running. The 5 question is when a plaintiff knows or should know of the underlying facts constituting the breach, 6 not when a plaintiff knows or should know that he may have a cause of action based on those facts.
7 See Galindo, 793 F.2d at 1509 (holding the statute begins to run when an employee discovers or 8 should have discovered the acts constituting the alleged violation). His confidential affidavit to the 9 NLRB in May 2009 contains all the underlying facts he now alleges in the instant lawsuit.

10 The Court notes that, under certain circumstances, the six-month statute of limitations may 11 be equitably tolled. Mr. Shek, however, has not made any claim that he is entitled to equitable 12 tolling. Moreover, the Court cannot divine any basis for equitable tolling in this case. For example, 13 the fact that Mr. Shek challenged the Union and individual defendants' actions in administrative 14 proceedings before the NLRB is immaterial because the Ninth Circuit has expressly held that, 15 because the filing of an NLRB action is optional, it is not a basis for tolling. See Conley v.
16 International Broth. of Elec. Workers, Local 639, 810 F.2d 913, 915-16 (9th Cir. 1987); see also 17 Harris v. Alumax Mill Products, Inc., 897 F.2d 400, 404 (9th Cir. 1990) (declining to toll the statute 18 of limitations during the pendency of a worker's compensation claim because it was merely optional 19 and would frustrate the national policy of prompt resolution of labor disputes). Although tolling 20 may be appropriate pending exhaustion of internal union remedies, see Galindo, 793 F.2d at 1509-21 10; see also Clayton v. Int'l Union, United Auto., Aerospace and Agric. Implement Workers of Am., 22 451 U.S. 679, 689 (1981) (holding plaintiff should exhaust internal union remedies unless those 23 procedures would be inadequate), that basis for tolling is inapplicable in the instant case where it is 24 clear that Mr. Shek already exhausted his internal union remedies. Similarly, tolling may be 25 appropriate where there is fraud by the union, see Gardner v. International Telegraph Employees 26 Local No. 9, 850 F.2d 518, 523 (9th Cir. 1988) (holding that plaintiff could toll his fair 27 representation claim only if he was totally and reasonably ignorant of the fact that the union lied to 28 him), but there is no plausible basis for such tolling in the case at bar. Although Mr. Shek claims

1 that the Union lied via Ms. Jung when she said that the contract had not been ratified (and therefore 2 the Union would not pursue arbitration of his grievance), he also claims that he knew that was a lie 3 when she stated such and told her so. See Shek Aff. at 9.

4 In sum, the limitations period of six months started to run at the latest in May 2009, and there 5 is no basis for equitable tolling. Hence, the claim for breach of the duty of fair representation, as 6 asserted against the Union, which was not filed until April 7, 2010 (i.e., more than six months after 7 May 2009), is untimely.

8 b. Individual Defendants

9 As discussed above, the claim for breach of the duty of fair representation, as pled against 10 the Union, is barred by the statute of limitations. The same reasoning is applicable with respect to 11 the claim against the individual defendants, Ms. Jung (Mr. Shek's Union representative) and Mr.
12 Maltzahn (the Union president).

13 Moreover, the claim against the individual defendants fails for an independent reason – 14 namely, individual union officials are immune from such claims. See Carter v. Smith Food King, 15 765 F.2d 916, 920-21 (9th Cir. 1985) (stating that “[i]t is well settled that section 301 provides the 16 basis for an action for breach of the duty of fair representation only against a union as an entity, and 17 not against individuals who happen to hold positions in that union”); see also Atkinson v. Sinclair 18 Refining Co., 370 U.S. 238, 247-48 (1962) (explaining that, “[w]hen Congress passed § 301, it 19 declared its view that only the union was to be made to respond for union wrongs, and that union 20 members were not to be subject to levy”). That immunity extends to state tort claims herein as well.
21 See Evangelista v. Inlandboatmen's Union of Pacific, 777 F.2d 1390, 1400 (9th Cir. 1985) (also 22 stating that immunity “extends to state tort claims against union officials and members brought in 23 conjunction with a section 301 [29 U.S.C. § 185] breach of duty claim against a union”);

24 2. Breach of Fiduciary Duty

25 In addition to a federal claim for breach of the duty of fair representation, Mr. Shek asserts a 26 federal claim for breach of fiduciary duty pursuant to the Labor-Management Reporting and 27 Disclosure Act (“LMRDA”). See 29 U.S.C. §501. The Act provides that officials of a labor 28 organization have a duty to, inter alia, “hold its money and property solely for the benefit of the organization and its members.” Id. § 501(a). The Act further provides that, when an officer is alleged to have violated any of his or her duties, and the labor organization or its governing board or officers refuse or fail to sue or recover damages or secure an accounting or other appropriate relief within a reasonable time after being requested to do so by any member of the labor organization, such member may sue such officer, agent, shop steward, or representative in any district court of the United States or in any State court of competent jurisdiction to recover damages or secure an accounting or other appropriate relief for the benefit of the labor organization. No such proceeding shall be brought except upon leave of the court obtained upon verified application and for good cause shown, which application may be made ex parte.

Id. § 501(b).

The Ninth Circuit has noted that

“[t]he real beneficiaries of a successful section 501 action are the union and its entire membership.” As both the case law and the statutory language indicate, section 501 suits are similar to shareholder derivative actions, in which a plaintiff brings an action in which “any relief obtained . . . shall benefit the corporation as a whole and not the suing individual directly.” “Correspondingly, Section 501(b) makes it clear that relief granted under Section 501 is for the benefit of the real party in interest, the union whose officers are charged with dereliction.”

O’Hara v. Teamsters Union Local No. 856, 151 F.3d 1152, 1161 (9th Cir. 1998).

In the instant case, the factual basis for Mr. Shek’s claim for breach of fiduciary duty is not clear. At best, Mr. Shek suggests that Defendants violated the LMRDA by double charging him Union dues (i.e., he paid Union dues at two different locations). See Shek Aff. at 9-10. Mr. Shek notified Ms. Jung of this problem sometime in May 2009. To the extent that this is the factual basis of the claim, the claim is problematic for several reasons. First, as indicated above, a § 501 claim that is brought for personal benefit, and not the benefit of the union, is not permissible. See O’Hara, 151 F.3d at 1161 (noting that the plaintiff’s “claims obviously were not for the benefit of the union[;] [r]ather, they were aimed at obtaining personal compensation for alleged harassment and improper termination”). Mr. Shek’s claim here seems to be one for personal benefit. The LMRDA is not directed to the kind of claim brought here. Second, regardless of whether the claim is one for personal benefit, Mr. Shek concedes that the Union took corrective action and reimbursed him for the double charging. See Docket No. 17 (Reply, Ex. H) (letter, dated 7/2/2010). Mr. Shek does not

1 argue that this reimbursement was inadequate. Finally, even if – as Mr. Shek suggested for the first 2 time at the hearing – the corrective action were not taken in a reasonable time (no action was taken 3 until after he filed the lawsuit), Mr. Shek failed to follow the proper procedures to bring a § 501 4 claim for breach of fiduciary duty. More specifically, he did not seek leave of the Court upon 5 verified application and for good cause shown. See Phillips v. Osborne, 403 F.2d 826, 830 (9th Cir.
 6 1968) (finding that good cause is a condition precedent to § 501 suits); see also International Union 7 of Operating Eng’r, Local 150, AFL-CIO v. Ward, 563 F.3d 276, 280 (7th Cir. 2009) (holding that 8 union members must show good cause and receive the court’s permission before bringing suit).

9 3. California Government Code

10 Finally, Mr. Shek brings claims pursuant to the California Government Code, namely, 11 §§ 3514.5(a)(1), 3541.5(a), and 3563.2(a), which deal with unfair employment practices. As 12 Defendants argue in their motion, these claims must be dismissed because they are applicable only 13 to public employees of the state of California. See Cal. Gov’t Code § 3513(c) (“‘State employee’ 14 means any civil service employee of the state, and the teaching staff of schools under the jurisdiction 15 of the State Department of Education or the Superintendent of Public Instruction”); id.
 16 § 3540.1(j) (“‘[E]mployee’ means any person employed by any public school employer”); id.
 17 § 3562(e) (“‘Employee’ or ‘higher education employee’ means any employee of the Regents of the 18 University of California, the Directors of the Hastings College of the Law, or the Trustees of the 19 California State University.”). In the instant case, Mr. Shek’s complaint focuses on his employment 20 while at Alta Bates, a private entity. Nothing in Mr. Shek’s complaint or the papers he has 21 submitted in conjunction with the pending motions suggests that he is a state employee as defined in 22 the relevant provisions of the Government Code. See, e.g., California Corr. Peace Officers Ass’n v.
 23 State, 142 Cal. App. 4th 198, 202 n.1 (2006) (holding that California Government Code §§ 3512-24 3524 generally govern relations between the state and its employees). Accordingly, all claims made 25 under California Government Code are dismissed.

26 III. CONCLUSION

27 For the foregoing reasons, Mr. Shek’s motion to amend is denied and Defendants’ motion to 28 dismiss is granted. The dismissal of each of the above claims is with prejudice. The Court

1 understands Mr. Shek's frustration in not obtaining, in his view, legal recourse for the asserted 2 violations of his rights. However, this Court is bound by the governing statutes and case law that set 3 forth the scope of rights afforded and procedural requirements such as time limits.

4 This order disposes of Docket Nos. 7, 11, 15, and 20.
